

LAUREN HAFFENDEN

Lakeside Restaurant and Coffee Shop, Surrey

"Lauren is a regular contributor in this member space, helping answer fellow members' questions, offering advice and sharing successes - especially when it comes to reducing disposable coffee cups."

A successful community relies on people giving and taking. As the assistant manager of a training restaurant, Lauren is more of a giver, sharing her knowledge and enthusiasm for all things sustainable, with her immediate colleagues, students and importantly the wider Food Made Good Community via the online platform.

HENRY UNWIN

Nando's UK & Ireland

It's a great sign of a forward-thinking business when its busy 'Do the Right Thing Manager' is keen not only to share knowledge and advice, but also attend and host numerous events - all in the spirit and goal of progress.

Working for a business with the power to make changes that really count, means Henry is also driven by and willing to use his influence generously - but mostly when it's driven by science-based targets.

ANDREA ZICK

OXO Tower Restaurant, Bar & Brasserie

"There's barely an SRA event at which Andrea is not present and in the last 12 months she's started running her own"

From the moment the switch was flicked to turn on the Food Made Good online platform, Andrea was an active participant, posting, listening, answering and generally contributing to the growing level of discussion and debate.

There's barely an SRA event at which Andrea is not present and in the last 12 months she's started running her own - beach cleans, specifically. Pop down to the banks of the Thames near OXO and you'll likely see Andrea and a bevy of SRA members collecting unwanted plastic.
